PREFACE

This booklet gives the celestial longitude of the planets Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, and Pluto, as well as the planetoid Chiron and the Moon's North Node (Caput Draconis, "the Dragon's Head"), for the first day of each calendar month of the 21st Century, plus the years immediately preceding and following; that is, from 2000 to 2101 C.E.

These positions are given in the Sidereal zodiac, using the Fagan-Bradley ayanamsa. This measurement of the parameters of the zodiac defines the mean longitude of the Vernal Point as 335°57'28".64 for the epoch 1950.0. Planetary positions are given for 0^h Ephemeris Time (ET) on the first day of each month. This approximates 0^h Universal Time (Greenwich Mean Time) within a small variance that, unfortunately, cannot be predicted across the next century, but is expected to amount to a few minutes at most. Within the scope of this volume – planetary positions at monthly intervals – this difference is negligible.

We have initially created this volume as a tool for ourselves. Prior to the 21st Century, similar volumes were available, which became a mainstay in our practical astrological work. The first was a slim volume by the astrologer Raphael, tabulating the monthly longitudinal degree (in the Tropical zodiac) of Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune (Pluto having not yet been discovered when it was created). Then, in 1975, ephemeris-maker extraordinaire Gene Lockhart created a similar volume for the years 1900-1999, using the Sidereal zodiac and adding Pluto.

In an era of omniprevalent computers, one might rightly ask why we would create a new printed ephemeris. The answer is that we use it ourselves at least weekly. Sometimes, an offline printed reference has practical, quick-reference advantages over even the fastest online tool.

In the present volume, we have elected to make only a few changes to the proven formula of Raphael and Lockhart.

First, we have given the planets to the minute of arc, rather than only the degree. Countless times in the last 30+ years, we have found ourselves wishing for just a little more precision in the listings. With today's computers for both calculation and typesetting, this was a far easier task than it would have been for our predecessors. On the other hand, since the main use of this monthly reference is to see broader patterns, the minutes seemed to provide a bit too much "noise" against the simplicity desired. We have chosen a typographical presentation that makes it easier to ignore the minutes when they are not important, and to have instant access to them when they are.

We have not included the planet Mars. It moves so rapidly during a month that it has never proved terribly useful to us for the main purposes of a reference such as this, viz., charting long-term outer planet transits and outer planet sign passages. Any argument for including Mars would also have substantiated including Venus and Mercury. We drew the line at the outer planets.

On the other hand, we have included two items not previously included. One of these is the Moon's North Node, Caput Draconis. Though considered a minor factor compared to the planets, it is useful to have a quick reference for its position. (It moves slower than Jupiter, circling the zodiac in approximately 19 years, so is rightfully considered one of the "slow" points.) Most ephemerides list only the mean longitude of Caput; we have given the true longitude. The second added factor is the planetoid Chiron, which lies between the orbits of Saturn and Uranus, but is approximately the size of the largest asteroids. Chiron has caught many astrologers' imaginations in the quarter century since its discovery. Its transits to the primary horoscope positions – Sun, Moon, and angles – has marked dramatic shift periods in the lives of people we have studied, points of time which stand out starkly when one looks back over the decades of one's life. This vividness (remembered across time) has not been observed with its transits to other planets, though the transits themselves have appeared relevant when observed at the time they have occurred. Though we are not prepared to publish anything approaching a "final word" on Chiron's relevance, it does seem to partake of some of the traits of Uranus and Saturn between which it lies – being substantially a second, quieter Uranus (especially in its sense of "awakener," "revealer," or sponsor of change), commonly marked by a clear sub-theme of "Teacher" – a term commonly applied to Saturn's transits. The listing is given so that each can make his or her own evaluation on the subject.

Please note that all factors listed are astronomically real. No fictional planets, unsighted planets, speculated planets, astrologically deduced planets, nor NASA satellites have been included.

The five outermost planets of our solar system have orbital periods of great duration, and spend longer periods of time in a given constellation. It is often useful to know these periods. Below are given averages of these times – each planet having an elliptical orbit that takes much longer to pass through some parts of the zodiac than others:

PLANET	ORBITAL PERIOD	AVERAGE TIME IN SIGN
Jupiter	11.86 years	0.99 years	(1 year)
Caput	18.61 years	1.55 years	(1½ years)
Saturn	29.50 years	2.46 years	(2½ years)
Chiron	50.70 years	4.23 years	(4¼ years)
Uranus	83.70 years	6.98 years	(7 years)
Neptune	164.41 years	13.70 years	(14 years)
Pluto	246.27 years	20.52 years	(20½ years)

The Synetic Vernal Point (SVP) is the Sidereal longitude of the Northern Hemisphere's Vernal Equinoctial Point. The amount that it differs from 0° Aries (the longitude that the VP is defined as marking in the Tropical zodiac) is called the ayanamsa, or difference between the starting points of the Tropical and Sidereal models. Adding the ayanamsa to the positions in this ephemeris will give the Tropical longitude. (Alternately, one can subtract the SVP numerical value, and add one sign. This is usually much faster.)

The table below gives the SVP at 10-year intervals during the 21st Century (0^h ET January 1). Because the Vernal Point regresses at the rate of about 50" per year (0°05' of arc every six years), its value can be estimated from these numbers to within a 0°01' accuracy by adjusting it 0°05' per six years.

EPOCH	SVP	AYANAMSA
2001.0	5)15'01"	24°44'59"
2011.0	5)06'04"	24°53'56"
2021.0	4)58'15"	25°01'45"
2031.0	4)49'20"	25°10'40"
2041.0	4)41'26"	25°18'34"
2051.0	4)32'39"	25°27'21"
2061.0	4)24'34"	25°35'26"
2071.0	4)16'00"	25°44'00"
2081.0	4)08'37"	25°51'23"
2091.0	3)59'23"	26°00'37"
2101.0	3)50'51"	26°09'09"

One of the most common uses of a reference such as this is in charting longer-term transits to a natal horoscope. We have added, as an appendix, concise interpretations of the transits of Pluto, Neptune, Uranus, Saturn, and Jupiter. These have all of the advantages and disadvantages of interpretations that are so concise. While they cannot possibly identify every detail of an event, they speak primarily to the essence of the experience of the time. As such, they have also been targeted at suggesting a positive expression of the energy, rather than in cataloguing everything that could possibly go wrong. They can, perhaps, be rightly criticized as being a bit too Pollyanna in this regard. This choice was seen as the more advantageous imbalance of two extremes. The reader should have little difficulty reading between the lines and anticipating the less pleasant manifestations that can arise, in each case, from resisting the natural current of one's life at the time.

INTERPRETATIONS OF OUTER PLANET TRANSITS TO NATAL PLANETS

[It is recommended that only the conjunction (0°), opposition (180°), and square (90°) – and, to a lesser extent, the semi-square (45°) and sesqui-square (135°) – be considered between a transiting planet and a planet in the birth chart. (Please note that the horoscopic Angles neither make nor receive aspects, other than the conjunction. What are here termed, for convenience, the opposition and square to the Midheaven and Ascendant are, in fact, conjunctions with other angles. The nomenclature was selected for simplicity.) Under normal circumstances, an orb of no more than 1° should be allowed, with maximum concentration of the effect centered at the time the aspect is exact, and at other times, within the 1° period, when faster planets reinforce and trigger the effect with their own transiting aspects. If transits are measured entirely in the Sidereal Zodiac, there will be no need to delete accrued precession in order to get the most accurate measurement.

Within the context of Sidereal Solar and Lunar Returns (“Solunars”), wider orbs are appropriate for conjunctions, oppositions, and squares occurring in the immediate foreground; that is, proximate to the angles of the return.]

Temple of Thelema is a true Outer Vehicle of the Greater Mysteries, providing ceremonial initiation, training, and regular group work, all in conformity with the principles of Liber L. vel Legis, The Book of the Law. Temple of Thelema is founded upon the teachings of College of Thelema, and combines methods of both East and West: the Ageless Wisdom of Asia's yoga and Europe's Alchemy and Qabalah – a practical blend of intellectual training, meditation, magical ritual, and self-discovery at every stage of progress.

“Know Thyself” has always been the central beacon of the Mysteries. We have added much that has been learned in the last 100 years concerning self-exploration and self-knowledge, to make “Know Thyself” a living reality. We have discovered specific methods that prepare people for lucid breakthrough experiences in the conscious recognition and articulation (to themselves) of their True Will.

While membership is invitational, interested persons are invited to request a meeting with the Chiefs of a Temple.

Temple of Thelema is selective. We seek those who truly desire to grow in Love, Power, and Wisdom, and to serve humanity in conformity with The Book of the Law. An investment of time, effort, and commitment is expected from each member. We seek those who aspire fervently to the Great Work, dare to undertake that Work, and commit to apply their best effort to effect Harmony within the Order and within the world.
